

ever be inherently worthless. A digester assumes too much, to determine what is, or what is not, in force. All questions of that sort should be settled by adjudication. If he were infallible in this respect, still his book would not contain the past or pre-existing laws which existing or controverted laws would depend, and a coming Legislature would much change the laws now in force. It is plain, then, that a compilation of the statutes at large, or an equivalent, is indispensable in every independent permanent State—so that the rule of civil conduct on any subject, at any period, may be readily found.

There is a reprint in extenso of the national laws and treaties, by Peters, in 8 volumes of 6718 pages small type. It introduces the acts in the order of their passage and original publication. It is a stereotype compilation with a view to the continuance of the series for coming years. It is a noble work, and the expense of it can well be borne by a great nation.

In proportion, however, to the vastness of the library is the difficulty of finding what is sought; and then, on the plan of Peters' compilation, all repealed, expired and superseded legislation is included. You have to depend in the indices and scan the successive enactments. There is no arrangement, no analysis, no sufficient indications of what at any period was the existing rule. The arrangement of the chaotic mass into proper divisions and subdivisions, would have increased the labor of the compiler an hundred fold; but just in that ratio it would have diminished the difficulty in the use of the work by the people.

Although the plan of the Digest of 1839 was good, yet it was in preparation only about two months, and Poundexter's Revision, the reprint of 1838 and acts of 1839, were the sources of compilation; hence, many law that were still useful, and some still in force, were omitted; the titles of acts were not inserted; the references were imperfect; the index not sufficiently varied, and by the adoption of a series of sections for each chapter, the original sections were changed.

Now the work on hand will correct all these errors, and avoid all the difficulties mentioned. It will be contained in one super-royal octavo volume of between 1200 to 1300 pages. It is arranged as nearly as practicable according to Blackstone's division of municipal law under 65 chapters. Each chapter is preceded by a table of its contents, and each act introduced by its title and date in the order of its enactment as an article, and so the original sections are retained. Each section headed by a description of its matter, and followed by the necessary references, and explanatory notes never neglected.

To have inserted even all the general and public legislation would have swelled the work into three or four volumes, and would have rendered it expensive, cumbersome, and in fact an abuse. Thus, for example, if all the revenue, police and militia acts had been included, each would have required a volume, and there would have been no use for any but the last acts forming together a system.

Yet no general act however repealed or superseded, has been omitted without suitable reference to it; and whenever by possibility it might be necessary to recur to defunct provisions, such as those governing sales of lands for taxes, and their redemption, they are retained. The grand aim of the compiler being to make the code a perfect substitute for states at large for all practical purposes, he has been careful to embrace every enactment necessary to be resorted to for the ascertainment of any and all rights that originated under the legislation Mississippi as a territory and State.

To illustrate his strict observance of this principle, he has inserted from the ordinance of 1787, and gives 26 acts in relation to county limits that were omitted in Poundexter's Digest.

Considering the difficulty and even impossibility of getting in every part of the State the acts of Congress concerning Mississippi, and the treatise with the Choctaws and Chickasaws, they have been included.

At the close of each chapter there is given a table of the local and private acts appropriate to such chapter. In a word, the work contains all the general and public legislation, either in force, or needed for use, and references to every act, whether public or private, from 1799 to 1846. The index is full and varied.

The legislation that may follow during the next ten years, may, if the plan of this work be continued, be made the subject of a section and volume—and so the series may proceed in future time, rendering an entire new code not only unnecessary but injurious—until a revision shall be made.

Each one of the editorial brotherhood of the State who may think it useful to give this notice some insertions under his editorial head, may expect a copy of the work.

Philosophical happiness is to want little, and enjoy much; vulgar happiness, is to want much, and enjoy little.

No. 56 CEDAR STREET, NEW-YORK.

LEE, JUDSON & LEE,
(LATE LEE & JUDSON.)

OCCUPY the spacious FIVE-STORY WHOLE of which is devoted to the exhibition and sale of the Single Article of PRINTED CALICOES.

Their present Stock consists of nearly One Thousand Packages,

Embracing some THOUSANDS of different patterns and colorings, and comprising everything desirable in the line, Foreign and Domestic.

BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.
New Styles are received almost every day, and many of them are got up for our own sales, and not to be found elsewhere.

Printed lists of prices, corrected from day to day, with every variation in the market, are placed in the hands of buyers.

Merchants will be able to form some idea of the extent and variety of our assortment, when we state, that the value of our usual stock of this One Article, is at least twice the value of the entire stock of dry goods usually kept by our largest wholesale jobbers. This fact, together with the fact that our means and attention, instead of being divided among a vast variety of articles, are devoted wholly to ONE, will render the advantages which we can offer to dealers perfectly obvious; and it shall be our care that none who visit our establishment shall meet with any disappointment.

Our assortment is complete at all seasons of the year.

New Orleans Type Foundry AND PRINTER'S DEPOT.

THE undersigned beg leave to announce to Publishers and Printers, that they have established a complete and extensive Type Foundry in this city.

The Book Letter of this Foundry was cut to order by workmen of long experience, and as no expense was spared to obtain the handsomest faces, and to perfect it in every respect, we will venture to say it will be found as handsome, if not the handsomest in the United States.

We have also a very handsome assortment of Flowers and Job Letter of the latest style to which we would call the attention of Printers before purchasing elsewhere.—All articles manufactured by us will be at a material equal, if not superior to any manufactured at the North; and as we shall furnish Type at New York prices, we trust to meet with encouragement.

We are now prepared to manufacture Brass Rule, and to execute orders for Type of any magnitude, with promptness. We would also particularly call the attention of Printers to our Leads, having an entire new set of Moulds, by which we are enabled to furnish a perfect article. We are also Agents for the sale of the Napier, Washington and Smith Presses, which, together with Chases, Cases, Composing Sticks, Furniture, Ink, and every other article in the Printing business, will be kept on hand, and furnished at Manufacturers' prices.

The proprietors of newspapers who will publish this advertisement six months, and send a paper to our office weekly, will be paid for the advertisement by purchasing six times the amount of advertising bill in Type.
